

Story starter!

They had been through so much together over the past months and years. They were well known throughout the land as the greatest team.

Every Saturday they had tested themselves against the best opposition across Britain.

They had given blood, sweat and tears on the pitch for each other, sticking together through thick and thin. Posing for their final photograph, they felt incredibly close; a band of brothers, bonded together through their shared passion, dedication and friendship.

Now that Britain was at war, they knew things would be different. They would have to test themselves against tougher opposition. Now, they would need each other more than ever...

Can you continue the story?

Question Time!

- Who do you think The Greatest Team are?
- Why are the team so closely bonded together?
- Why do you think they will need each other more than ever now?
- What does it mean by 'tougher opposition'?
- Why is it their final photograph?

